

Ken Larson

Communicator, Exploration Space
Kennedy Space Center

Ken has worked in the entertainment industry for over three decades as an actor, entertainer, lighting director, sound engineer, video effects engineer, cameraman and producer; and has served as Goodwill Ambassador for the country of Canada.

Early in his career, Ken also wrote news stories for his father, who was a pool correspondent for ABC and other radio networks from the first Snark missile to the last Skylab mission.

As an actor, Ken worked in NYC on daytime dramas, commercials and film.

He began working with IMAX project systems in 1986, which eventually led him to the Kennedy Space Center Visitor Complex as an A/V specialist and technician.

In 2010, Ken became a Communicator at Kennedy Space Center's Exploration Space, a position that combines his life-long passions for space exploration and performing. Each day, he sets out to inspire children and adults alike to be a part of the future of space exploration. Says Ken, "It doesn't get any better than this."
